

BRAZOS COUNTY DIVORCE RECORDS, 1856-1880

compiled by Bill Page

The first divorce in Brazos Co. took place in 1856, fifteen years after the creation of the county. During this period, divorce was a highly emotional issue. Readers should be cautious about accepting the stated reasons for the divorce as the complete truth.

The following records are taken from the microfilmed Civil Minutes (Brazos County District Court) (reels # 1020039-1020040). The person listed first initiated the divorce. In a few cases, the records have been supplemented with information from other sources. Researchers should check the original records to insure complete accuracy.

SHEPARD, L. Nancy; Alfred SHEPARD. Book B, pp. 279, 301, 302, Sept. 1856. C.C. SEALS and William C. BOILS were witnesses. Alfred SHEPARD abandoned his wife and children in Sept. 1852. The couple were divorced, and Nancy SHEPARD was given custody of their two minor children: John A. SHEPARD and Stephen SHEPARD.

McLEASTER, Sarah; Hiram B. McLEASTER. Book B, pp. 281, 287, 310-311, 329, Sept. 1856. This couple had been married about 2 years when the divorce was filed. They lived together for about 18 months, during which time "he sold and squandered nearly all of her personal property." The case mentions "her child" (but not the child's name). (According to Washington Co. marriage records, Sarah J. MILLICAN and Hiram B. McLEASTER were married in January 1851).

CURD, Ezekial; Martha J. CURD. Book B, pp. 281, 309- 310. Sept. 1856. They were divorced. (According to Brazos Co. marriage records, Martha Jane VESS married Ezekiel CURD on 21 Apr. 1853).

Ezekiel CURD accused his wife of adultery with Mark WEAVER. Martha CURD denied that charge, and said that not only did her husband cruelly beat her, but that he had once watched as another man (Eason C. THOMAS) beat her. Brazos Co. Record Book District Court, reel 1020043, pp. 75-78.

Ruth DAVIS waived her right to any portion of the community property, so that it could be used to help care for the children. On 22 Oct. 1879, Ruth DAVIS faked her own drowning at Galveston. She had gone there with her sister Mary DAVIS (wife of Napoleon DAVIS, brother of B.H. DAVIS) and M.W. McCRAW, a Bryan lawyer. Ruth and Mary were daughters of Col. T.D. WILSON. In May 1880, McCRAW revealed the deception at Ruth DAVIS' request. They said that he alone had helped her with the plot, and that her sister had not been involved. McCRAW helped Ruth DAVIS move to New York city. McCRAW visited N.Y. often, as he had a business office there. Ruth DAVIS lived in a boarding house in which he also had a room. They stated that their conduct had been "proper" and offered to produce witnesses who could testify to that. Ruth "never uttered a word against Maj. DAVIS. She wanted to get rid of Bryan, its talk, not him." She said that her motive was "not for any wicked purpose."
